WHAT WILL CHINA BE LIKE IN 2030?

China has confounded the doubters and critics and succeeded, quite remarkably, in meeting projections which were seen as overly optimistic. In 2014, according to the IMF, it became the world's largest economy measured by ppp. But what of the future? It now has to shift the basic paradigm of its economy if it is to avoid getting stuck. Under Xi Jinping, its ambition is not just to be an economic power but also a political, cultural and military power. If it is successful in these objectives then by 2030 the world will look very different and China will have become the world's predominant power.
